

Noooooooooo It would be terrible to lay out a plan for the day, only to find it's Sunday. But don't worry, because you can still plan! Just use this handy guide for making the best weekend morning ever. The first step is to get your priorities in order by way of some planner-fulfillment. That means penciling in some time to do what you really want with your life, like finally reading that book or catching up on sleep or whatever else it is that you do when you're not doing what other people want. You will need at least 4 hours total. If not more. After that, you'll need to let loose with some relaxing. If you're not into bubble baths, then try the shower. Put on some nice music and really scrub down. Getting clean is also a great time to think deep thoughts, so you might as well have a list of them ready before turning the faucet on. Then again, maybe nothing is troubling your brain at all. Maybe there's just nothing on it at all! Just try to enjoy the fact that your mind is an empty canvas right now. And if something comes to you during this time, just write it down later on. Planning is a lot less stressful if you're not carrying around a whole notebook full of your future worries. After that, it's time to get dressed, because you should do that right away, before you forget. Some people like to put on jeans or something else casual, but if you want to keep things classy try this: 1.) Fold the cuff of your pants 1x. 2.) Put them on 1x. 3.) Turn them inside-out and repeat steps 1 and 2 10x. 4.) See if you can walk across the room naked. If so, you can stop. If not, just put some pants on and go on. Finally, it's time to do something that's actually quite stimulating, like spending money. If you're the type of person who loves to shop and spend and buy and buy and buy and more than anyone else then you should plan your shopping for this weekend around sales. Or at least make sure none of your things are on sale this weekend. And if you're one of the rare few who don't like to shop for clothes or anything like that (even though clothes are literally everywhere), then take some time out to get your mind in the right place before going out tonight. You need to be prepared, because you never know when you might meet someone extraordinary who will change your life in an instant! And that's the kind of thing that happens when you're not thinking about anything at all. Now, it's time to party. But don't forget to list the last three items on your agenda before leaving your house, so you can do them in order: 1.) Buy a cheap bottle of wine. 2.) Go see a movie. 3.) Get wasted and end up in bed with someone else.
